The security of data management and the rights of data subjects (REGULATION (EU) 2016/679 OF THE EUROPEAN PARLIAMENT AND OF THE COUNCIL of 27 April 2016 on the protection of natural persons with regard to the processing of personal data and on the free flow of such data, and 95/46/ EC directive repealing (general data protection regulation)

The processing of personal data must be legal and fair. It must be transparent for natural persons how their personal data is collected, used, accessed or otherwise handled, as well as in connection with the extent to which personal data is or will be handled. The principle of transparency requires that information and communication related to the management of personal data be easily accessible and comprehensible, and that it is formulated in clear and simple language. This principle applies in particular to informing the data subjects about the identity of the data controller and the purpose of the data management, as well as to further information aimed at ensuring fair and transparent handling of the personal data of the data subject, as well as to the information that the data subjects have the right to receive confirmation and information about the data processed about them. The natural person must be informed about the risks, rules, guarantees and rights related to the management of personal data, as well as how he can exercise the rights he is entitled to in connection with data management. The specific purposes of personal data management must first of all be explicitly formulated and legal, and also defined at the time of collection of personal data. Personal data must be suitable and relevant for the purpose of their management, and the range of data must be limited to the minimum necessary for the purpose. And for this, it must be ensured that the storage of personal data is limited to the shortest possible period. Personal data can only be processed if the purpose of data processing cannot be reasonably achieved by other means. In order to ensure that the storage of personal data is limited to the necessary period, the data controller establishes deletion or regular review deadlines. All reasonable steps must be taken to correct or delete inaccurate personal data. Personal data must be managed in a way that ensures an appropriate level of security and confidentiality, including in order to prevent unauthorized access to personal data and the tools used to manage personal data, as well as their unauthorized use.

In order for the processing of personal data to be legal, it must be based on the consent of the data subject or have some other legal basis established by law - either in this regulation or in other EU or member state law as mentioned in this regulation - including the need to comply with the legal obligations applicable to the data controller, the fulfillment of any contract concluded by the data subject, and the steps to be taken prior to the conclusion of the contract requested by the data subject.
